

Mark Martinez

U.S History - Per.

5

February 13, 2017

Manifest Destiny Changes the American Landscape

The idea of Manifest Destiny changed the American landscape by the 1860s. Since the Americans involved around the idea Manifest Destiny “... the Republic of Texas, may be erected into a new State, to be called the State of Texas” (Document C: Congress resolution to annex Texas, 1845). This shows that the United States of America approved and annexed Texas, so Texas is now a official state of the United States.

The americans stated that the “Republic of Texas, shall be transmitted to the President of the United States, to be laid before Congress for its final action” (Document C: Congress resolution to annex Texas, 1845). This is important because congress has certain rules to follow for these kinds of circumstances.

From the “boundary line between the two Republics shall commence in the Gulf of Mexico, three leagues from land, opposite the mouth of the Rio Grande, otherwise called Rio Bravo del Norte, or opposite the mouth of its deepest branch, if it should have more that one branch emptying directly into the sea; from thence up the middle of that river, following the deepest channel, where it has more than one, to the point where it strikes the southern boundary of New Mexico; thence, westwardly, along the whole southern boundary of New Mexico” (Document F: Article V of the Treaty of Guadalupe Hidalgo). This illustrates the boundaries of the United States and how big its growing.

In summary, the americans grew because of manifest destiny. The americas grew because they annexed texas, confirmed with the president and congress, as well as setup the new borders. Even though the idea of Manifest Destiny was to move west there's always a point on where to stop.

